

There is also a new species, described by Virey, called the parrot goldfinch, which is found in the Sandwich Islands of the South Sea. Its beak, is, in fact, similar to that of a parrot; but it must not be confounded with the parrot-finch of Latham, which has, in reality, nothing of the parrot about it, except the distribution of its colours.