THE SAJOU.*

WE are acquainted with two varieties in this species, the Brown Sajou, (fig. 214.) commonly called the capuchin monkey; and the Grey Sajou, which differs from the other only in the colour of its hair. They are of the same size, the same shape, and the same disposition: both are lively, active, and very amusing, by their tricks and nimbleness. We have had them alive; and of all the sapajous they appeared to be those with which the temperature of our climate seemed least to disagree. They live here for many years without much trouble, provided they are kept in a warm room during winter. We can even give examples of their producing in this country. Two were brought forth at Madame de Pompadour's, at Versailles, one at M. de Reamur's, at Paris, and another at Madame de Poursel's, in Gatinois; but these were only single productions, whereas in their own climate they often bring forth two. These sajous are very fantastical

* This word is abridged from cayouassou or sajouassou; the names by which these animals are called at Maragnon.
