

accompanied by clouds of steam, to the height of ten or twelve feet. The column seemed to burst, and sinking down, produced a wave, which caused the water to overflow the basin. A succession of eighteen or twenty jets now took place, some of which rose to a height of fifty or sixty feet. After the last eruption, which was the most violent, the

TAB. 13.—PLAN OF THE GEYSERS.