

With this conviction, I venture to offer the present volumes, with such modifications of the original plan as circumstances have rendered necessary, as a guide for the Student, and the Amateur Collector—for the intelligent Reader who may require a general knowledge of the subject, without intending to pursue Geology as a science—and for the Tourist who may wish, in the course of his travels, to employ profitably a leisure hour in quest of those interesting memorials of the ancient physical revolutions of our globe, which he will find everywhere presented to his observation.

CRESCENT LODGE,
CLAPHAM COMMON,
May, 1844.