

---

Your ministers seem more free from anti-American prejudices than the ordinary writers of travels, reviews, or newspaper articles, and they have a great advantage over our government at Washington. One of our statesman, a late candidate for the presidency, is said to have declared, that when so many millions are admitted into the cabinet, it is scarcely possible to manage a delicate point of foreign policy with discretion."