

the other nations of Lower Guinea. They are next in estimation to the Minas, being steady, industrious, and intelligent. They make excellent husbandmen. They are generally of good height, with features having less of the negro stamp than those of the Congo: the forehead tolerably high, the nose not much depressed, and the lips moderately full.

The extent of the Congo territory is now comprised between the Zaire and Dande rivers, or about two hundred miles of sea-coast. These limits define with sufficient accuracy the extent within which the Congo language prevails.

The Congoes file their teeth after the fashion of the Angoyas. Sometimes, though not often, they have a few marks on each temple.

The Angola and the Kasanji are considered in Rio as of different nations, but their languages are the same, with hardly a dialectical
