XVIII.* The Islands of San Bernardo and the Islands of Danger .__ Mendane discovered a group of islands, named by him San Bernardo. These islands have been seen by Captains Freycinet and Bellinghausen. Not far from them Byron discovered a small group, which he named Islands of Danger. Notwithstanding a difference of latitude of half a degree, the two groups have been considered as one and the same. It has not been thought impossible that in Byron's latitudes there might have been a typographical error: besides, none, of all the navigators who have passed here, have ever found a second group, which they could not have missed if it really existed. Captain Duperrey, however, who is, as I have said above, a high authority in whatever relates to the hydrography of the South Seas, is of a different opinion: he maintains that Byron's Islands of Danger do exist. In order to settle that question, it is necessary to search under the meridian of the islands San Bernardo, as determined by Captain Bellinghausen, for these Islands of Danger in the latitude assigned to them by Byron, as well as for the chain of rocks of which he speaks, and which are situated, according to him, to the eastward. This has not been done yet, and it would be very desirable if it was done, in order not to leave the least doubt on the subject.

XIX.* Marianne Islands.—On Captain Freycinet's chart there is to be seen, to the southwest of the island of Assumption, rocks, by the name of Mary's. Rocks of the same name have been seen by La Perouse, to the northward of Assumption Island. In case the Expedition should extend its exploratory researches to the northern hemisphere, this doubtful point should be settled.

XX.* Caroline Islands.-These islands have been so well surveyed by Captain Duperrey and Captain Lütke, that there is very little now left to be done concerning them. I shall, however, point out here some islands that require to be determined with great precision: 1. The island named by Captain Morell, Fasolis, is most likely the same with Captain Lütke's, Farroilep; but a difference of 21' in latitude, makes this doubtful. 2. Island Lydia, on Captain Duperrey's chart. We do not know by whom it has been discovered, nor who has determined its situation. 3. I have endeavoured to prove, in my Supplementary Memoir of the Caroline Islands, that the islands Bordelaire, Fame, Campbell, and the island St. Augustine, are one and the same. This hypothesis requires to be verified. 4. The Monteverde Islands ought to be surveyed; what Captains Monteverde and Morell, the only navigators who have seen them, have said of them, is not sufficiently satisfactory. 5. We see on Captain Duperrey's chart of the Caroline Islands, several islands, of which we know nothing more than the
