

south the Saxons were kept off from the Coast, which was soon to be their prey, along the whole extent from the estuary of the Wash (Metaris) and the Marshes of Lynn, to the western extremity of Sussex.

The command of the Dux Britanniarum is stated in two parts: first are mentioned a number of stations distributed among the Brigantes, and along the great road to the north; then a greater series of stations on the line of the Vallum. They appear all to be garrisoned by the Sixth Legion, now in almost the 300th year of its glorious occupation of Eburacum.

Sub Dispositione Viri Spectabilis Ducis Britanniae.

	Names of Places in Notitia.	Modern names where certainly known.
Præfectus Legionis Sextæ.
Præfectus Equitatus Dalmatarum.	Præsidio.	} The Garrison at York.
Præfectus Equitatus Crispianorum.	Dano.
Præfectus Equitatus Cataphractariorum.	Morbio.
—————
Præfectus Numeri	Barcariorum } Tigrisiensium. }	Arbeia.
Præfectus Numeri	Nerviorum } Dictiensium. }	Dicti.
—————
Præfectus Numeri	Vigilum.	Concangios.
Præfectus Numeri	Exploratorum.	Lavatris. Bowes.
Præfectus Numeri	Directorum.	Verteris. Brough.
Præfectus Numeri	Defensorum.	Braboniaco. { (Brovonacæ) Kirby Thure.
—————
Præfectus Numeri	Solensium.	Maglovæ.
Præfectus Numeri	Pacensium.	Magis.
Præfectus Numeri	Longovicariorum.	Longovico.
Præfectus Numeri	Dervationensis.	Dervatione.

On this list we may remark, that it is in military, not geographical order. The cavalry is mentioned first; then two numeri of troops, which appear to be of foreign origin, but to have received additional designations from the places to which