

long years of preparation, from our theological seminaries, burning with the desire to do what they can for the good of man and the glory of God. The field is open and inviting, and the ripening grain abundant. May those who take the sickle have a large share in so noble a work, and late in life return, bringing their sheaves with them.