

see them, of the inner world by saying that it is an unending stream or a changing firmament of Thought, that it contains the whole of the outer world in the form of Thought, that it escapes the modern method of the Exact Sciences, exhibiting in opposition to the outer world the two characteristics of discontinuity and of unlimited growth.

In using the introspective method, we shall have to bear in mind constantly these characteristics of the Firmament of Thought.