

It will now be our task to trace, if possible, some of the steps through which this great possession of humanity has grown during historic times.

In doing so we have to go outside of purely individual development, but we may be able to trace a parallelism between the growth of an individual mind and that of civilised society at large.