

servient to voluntary motion. The former, soon after their exit from the spine, pass through a small ganglion (g,) and then unite with the nerves from the anterior column, composing, by the intermixture of their fibres, a single nervous trunk (n,) which is afterwards divided and subdivided in