

more resemble the tones of a dog than those of a cat." This is certainly a rare phenomenon, and were this production of milk without impregnation more frequent, it would render female animals more analogous to female birds who produce eggs without connection with the male.

The Russians have brought several dogs to Paris, as Siberians, a very different race from those which we have described ; one in particular, both male and female, were about the size of a common greyhound, with pointed noses, ears half erect, and long tails ; they were entirely black, excepting a spot of white which the female had upon the top of the head, and one which the male had upon his tail ; they were very fond, but exceedingly dirty and voracious, and it was almost impossible to satisfy them with food ; upon the whole, they were evidently of the same race as we have treated of under the denomination of Iceland dogs.

Mr. Collinson, who had made various researches concerning the Siberian dogs, informed me that their noses were pointed, and their ears long, that some of them carried their tails like the wolf, others in the same manner as the fox, and that they certainly engendered with both those animals ; that he had himself seen
