is eatable. The savages hunt this animal by preference, and feed on his flesh heartily.

SUPPLEMENT.

M. de la BORDE has sent me an account of three opossums, which he kept in a cask at Cayenne; in most particulars it agrees with the description already given; he says they are very easily tamed, and feed upon fish, flesh, bread, &c. that those he had possessed no disagreeable smell, but that there are two species, the one which has so strong an odour as to be called stinking by the inhabitants, and that their flesh is not good to eat.

M. de Vosmaër, to his description of the flying squirrel, has added a note, in which he says, "the coes-coes is the bosch of the East Indies, the philandre of Seba, and the didelphie of Linnæus. M. de Buffon has confined this animal to the new world, and positively denics its existence in the East Indies; but I can assure that learned naturalist that Valentin and Seba said no more than the truth, in affirming
