

sistance which I have received from several other naturalists, in the course of this and my other works; but I must be here allowed to return my most sincere thanks to the Rev. Professor Henslow, who, when I was an undergraduate at Cambridge, was one chief means of giving me a taste for Natural History—who, during my absence, took charge of the collections I sent home, and by his correspondence directed my endeavors—and who, since my return, has constantly rendered me every assistance which the kindest friend could offer.
