Portus must be the mouth of the Lune; Belisama is the Ribble, in whose vale are Samlesbury and Ribchester; and Seteia is the estuary of Mersey and Dee.

On the eastern coast we read in Ptolemy :-

Greek.	Latin.	Long.		Lat.
Ουεδρα ποταμου εκβολαι	Vedræ fluv. ostia	200	10'	58°	30'
Δουνον κολπος			15	57	30
Γαβραντουικων κολπος	Gabrantvicorum Sinus .			57	00
Οκελου ακρον	Oceli Promontorium	21	15	56	40
Αβου ποταμου εκβολαι	Abi fluv. ostia			56	30

These points are not so chained together by the nature of the coast, as to leave no doubt of their true situation.

By universal consent the Humber estuary claims the old name of Abus ($A\beta ov \pi o\tau a\mu ov \epsilon\kappa\beta o\lambda a\iota$). At some point north of this a projecting part of the land was called Ocelum Promontorium ($O\kappa\epsilon\lambda ov a\kappa\rho ov$). Camden supposed the modern name of Kellnsey, a little north of the Spurn, and the old name Ocelum, to be derived from the British Y-kill, a promontory, low tongue, or narrow tract of land. But the words of the Greek author imply elevation, really a cape or headland, not a mere extension of land. For $a\kappa\rho ov$ seems to be merely a translation of the British name given before, as that is clearly derived from Uchel, elevated. By later writers, especially Mr. Walker of Malton, the place of this promontory is fixed at Flamborough Head.

Farther to the north was Gabrantvicorum sinus ($\Gamma a\beta \rho av$ - $\tau o \nu \iota \kappa \omega \nu \delta$ και $\lambda \epsilon \gamma o \mu \epsilon \nu o \varsigma$ Eu $\lambda \iota \mu \epsilon \nu o \varsigma$ κολπος,—the bay of the Gabrantvici, also called the well-havened Bay. Camden places this at Sewerby (as if that were 'sure-bay') near Bridlington, deriving the name from Gaffran, the Welsh for goat, an animal which, he says, was abundant at Flamborough. By later writers it is carried farther north to Filey Bay (as if that were the Portus Felix*). Still farther to the north we have Dunum Sinus

^{*} The following are conjectures on the word Gabrantvic. 1. Is it not a mistake for Brigantvic,—there being no other mention of such a tribe as Gabrantvici, while the Brigantes are expressly said to stretch from sea to
