

	Page
Robin Hood's Bay—Ravenshill—inscription—fault—section of the Lias strata—Equiseta in cliff at High Whitby	137-139
Whitby—Dunum Sinus—Streoneshalh—Abbey—beauty of the vicinity—Museum—Pier—dislocation of strata—Sandsend—Plesiosaurus—Kettleiness—Runswick Bay—Staithe—fossils—Boulby or Rockcliff—Plesiosaurus—Huntcliff—Saltburn—Redcar—Tees mouth	139-143

CHAPTER V.

CLIMATE.

Relation to the physical aspect of the county.—Temperature of air at York,—of springs,—of each month.—Ranges of temperature,—of four critical months in various places.—Postponement of temperature in York Minster,—below the surface of ground,—in dales,—by the sea-side.—Highest and lowest temperatures.—Temperature of night and day.—Occurrence of frost.—Comparison of the climate of York with that of other places within and beyond the boundary of the county.....	143-152
Humidity of the air.—Fall of rain at York, in each month, compared with that of London.—Fall of rain at several other places in Yorkshire.—Number of days on which rain, hail or snow falls at York.—Wet-bulb experiments.—Experiments on the quantity of rain at different heights above the ground.....	152-161
Winds.—Prevalent directions of wind at York.—Effect on the air,—on the local temperature.—Coldest wind,—warmest wind.—Comparative dampness of different winds.—Character of rain with different winds.—Barometric pressure influenced by the direction of wind.—The daily oscillation of the barometer	161-166

CHAPTER VI.

MAGNETISM.

Magnetic elements at York—the declination toward the west—the dip from the horizon—the magnetic force.....	166, 167
--	----------

CHAPTER VII.

GEOLOGICAL HISTORY.

The Natural History of the land—traceable in order of succession of events, but not to be expressed in chronology.....	168
--	-----