

C O N T E N T S .

CHAPTER I.

	PAGE
The little boy of the farm-house.—His early education.—Enters the navy.—A mutiny, and its happy termination.—Instance of great physical strength.—Quits the service.—Subsequent adventures.—Enters the coasting trade.—The master's home.—Unhappy accidents.—The curate of Nigg.—Vessel lost in a storm.—Jack's narrative of the shipwreck.—A second marriage.—Terrible anger of a good-natured man.....	1

CHAPTER II.

My birth and parentage.—Mythologic character of the recollections of early childhood.—My father lost in a storm on the sea.—An apparition.—A dreary season.—Stanzas.—My early education and reading.—Donald Roy.—Supernatural element in the religious character of the Highlanders.—Donald become a Seceder.—Some account of his descendants.—My two uncles.....	19
---	----

CHAPTER III.

Blind Harry's "Wallace," and its effects upon me.—Enter the grammar school.—Early individual development correspondent with an early national one.—Lessons learned at the grammar school.—Bellicose peat expeditions.—The parish schoolmaster.—My progress in Latin.—Development of a talent for story-telling.—Became a sort of favorite with the master.—The yearly cock-fight.—My dislike of such barbarous exhibitions.—Evils of fixing the foundation of ethics on the practices of old divines.—Old Francie, the retired clerk, and his curious collections.—Lessons learned on the sea-shore.—The blank mica and garnet crystals of Cromarty.—Exploration of Cromarty Hill.—A wild paradise of rocks.—"Getting siller in the stanes".....	38
--	----