

CHAPTER XX.

	PAGE
Preface to my volume of verse.—Write for the Courier on the herring fishery,— extracts.—Reception of my verses by the critics.—A near criticism.—A severe attack from an itinerant elocutionist,—the lecturer barely escapes a drubbing. —A generous critique from Edinburgh.—My circle of friends become consider- ably enlarged.—Interview with Dr. Baird.—Other literary enterprises.—The error of forsaking an honest calling.—An interesting group of literary ladies. — Jeu d'esprit on a young naval officer.....	416

CHAPTER XXI.

Land wastes of Culbin.—Peculiarities of the sub-aërial formation.—Great age of the globe,—the Scriptures do not fix its antiquity.—Tremendous storm on the Hill of Cromarty,—extraordinary character of the scene.—Origin of Scottish mosses.—Molusca of the Shandwick lias.—Dissection of a loligo.—Theoolitic and lias deposits.—Organism of the second age of vertebrate existence.....	437
--	-----

CHAPTER XXII

The Baptist cause at Cromarty.—Opposition to the Catholic Relief Bill.—Trouble in the parish,—a dire ecclesiastical dispute.—Approach of the cholera.—Our Barric Sanitaire measure.—The virtues of the smoke of sulphur and chloride tested,—fumigation of the Inverness politicians.—Ravages of the pestilence.— A time of peace favorable to the growth of opinion.—The Revolution in France, —reception of the news by the crew of a French lugger.—Effects of the Reform Bill on the politics of Cromarty.—Beginning and ending of my municipal career.....	453
---	-----

CHAPTER XXIII.

Evenings with the ladies.—A pretty young lady and “the Cromarty poet.”—A lovely apparition.—The propriety of conversing privately with an operative mason.—A dream maiden displaced by a real one.—Thoughts of a homo in the
--