

CONTENTS.

ix

LECTURE FIFTH.

	PAGE
The Lias of the Hill of Eathie—The Beauty of its Shores—Its Deposits, how formed—Their Animal Organisms indicative of successive Platforms of Existences—Laws of Generation and of Death—The Triassic System—Its Economic and Geographic Importance—Animal Footprints, but no Fossil Organisms, found in it—The Science of Ichnology originated in this fact—Illustrated by the appearance of the Compensation Pond, near Edinburgh, in 1842—The Phenomena indicated by the Footprints in the Triassic System—The Triassic and Permian Systems once regarded as one, under the name of the New Red Sandstone—The Coal Measures in Scotland next in order of Succession to the Triassic System—Differences in the Organisms of the two Systems—Extent of the Coal Measures of Scotland—Their Scenic Peculiarities—Ancient Flora of the Carboniferous Period—Its Fauna—Its Reptiles and Reptile Fishes—The other Organisms of the Period—Great Depth of the System—The Processes by which during countless Ages it had been formed,	153-194

LECTURE SIXTH.

Remote Antiquity of the Old Red Sandstone—Suggestive of the vast Tracts of Time with which the Geologist has to deal—Its great Depth and Extent in Scotland and England—Peculiarity of its Scenery—Reflection on first discovering the Outline of a Fragment of the Asterolepis traced on one of its Rocks—Consists of Three Distinct Formations—Their Vegetable Organisms—The Caithness Flagstones: how formed—The Fauna of the Old Red Sandstone—The Pterichthys of the Upper or Newest Formation—The Cephalaspis of the Lower Formation—The Middle Formation the most abundant in Organic Remains—Destruction of Animal Life in the Formation sudden and violent—The Asterolepis and Coccosteus —The Silurian the Oldest of the Geologic Systems—That in which Animal and Vegetable Life had their earliest beginnings—The Theologians and Geologists on the Antiquity of the Globe—Extent of the Silurian System in Scotland—The Classic Scenery of the Country situated on it—Comparatively Poor in Animal and Vegetable Organisms—The Unfossiliferous Primary Rocks of Scotland—Its Highland Scenery formed of them—Description of Glencoe—Other Highland Scenery glanced at—Probable Depth of the Primary Stratified Rocks of Scotland—How deposited—Speculations of Philosophers regarding the Processes to which the Earth owes its present Form—The Author's Views on the subject,	195-240
---	---------