

Plants, birds, reptiles, and mammals all tell of the immediate neighbourhood of land, and the marine fossils now to be mentioned seem in fact to have lived at the mouth of a great river.

FIG. 49.

Group of Fossils from the London Clay.

Nearly 60 genera of fish have been noted from the London Clay alone, including species of Lamna