

exemplification of that triad which forms the celebrated dialectical evolution in Hegel's System: the Self, the not-Self, and the absorption of the not-Self in a higher and richer Self. We thus conclude that there are three worlds of existence—simple existence, which is purely personal, real existence in an outer world, and reappearance in an inner world of Value.