prehend the benevolent effect of it, or in other words, its necessity to our very existence, I may be excused for stating the argument to the reader as I have delivered it in my lectures to the College of Surgeons.

"Without meaning to impute to you inatten-"tion or restlessness, I may request you to ob-" serve how every one occasionally changes his " position and shifts the pressure of the weight " of his body; were you constrained to retain " one position during the whole hour, you would "rise stiff and lame. The sensibility of the " skin is here guiding you to that, which if neg-" lected, would be followed even by the death of "the part. When a patient has been received " into the hospital with paralysis of the lower " part of the body, we must give especial di-" rections to the nurse and attendants that the " position of his limbs be changed at short "intervals, that pillows be placed under his " loins and hams, and that they be often shifted. " If this be neglected, you know the conse-"quence to be inflammation of the parts that "press upon the bed; from which come local " irritation, then fever and mortification and " death.

"Thus you perceive that the natural sensi-"bility of the skin, without disturbing your "train of thought, induces you to shift the body "so as to permit the free circulation of the
